The New Orleans Program of May 16, publishes a supplement containing a view of the great crovasse at Bell's plantation, and a statement of the condition of the waters. According to the Peopuse's figures the damages occa-sioned by this dimeter, will reach four or five millions of dollars. It says:

millions of dollars. It says:

On no less than five different occasions has the city of New Orleans been partially hundated by crevasses which occurred in the lavess above it. The first of the visitations was in 1785, the second in 1791, the third in 1799, the fourth in 1870, and the last in 1860. This spring, the river is unusually high, higher laded than it has been since 1849, but the layees in the vicinity of the city are so well watched and kept in such a thorough state, of repair, that no fears of an overflow are entertained.

The plantation of Mr. Bell, on which the occasion occurred, in situated about two miles above the upper limits of the city, and on the opposite of right bank. Through the leves at this point there was formerly a wooden dules, inclused on all sides, through which water was conveyed from the river to the rice fields in the rear of the plantation. In repairing the leves after the entityation of rice had been abandoned, this scales was removed, and the place which it had occupied was filled with earth, between the contract of the plantation.

were relied on as a protection for the planta-tions and villages further down the river, and carried devastation in their track for many miles. The damages caused by this overflow are variously estimated at from four to five millions of dollars, the general impression be-ing that for two seasons no sugar crops, can be raised on the submerged plantations.
